PROLOGUE

A country of tremendous opportunities and enormous talent, India is blessed with huge untapped potential to become a major economic power within a very short period. Realisation of this dream requires vision and self-confidence. Above all, it demands dedicated efforts in the right direction at the right time. The chemical industry has a very important role in the realisation of this dream as it makes a major contribution towards improvement in the quality of life of the people.

The chemical industry meets a variety of basic needs – household goods, plastics, polyester for clothing, soaps and detergents and so on. It also has the capability to ensure food security in a large number of developing nations by partnering with the farming community to increase the yield and reduce post-harvest wastage during transportation, storage and distribution. It contributes to the enhancement of grain productivity and the management of water resources. It can ensure healthcare for all by creating cost effective medical preventive care. In the long term, such initiatives would lead to a healthier society and, also, eventually expand the consumer base for the industry.

The chemical industry, which is the second largest in the world, offers great opportunities as well as big challenges. The Indian chemical industry has already emerged as a major driver of the country's economic progress. In the last three decades, it has leapfrogged from small processing units to large integrated enterprises. Several of them meet international standards in size, technology and services.

Though it forms only 1.5 per cent of the global chemical industry, the Indian chemical industry contributes to about 7 per cent of India's GDP and 5.6 per cent of its exports. It is likely to be in the high growth phase in the next few decades with growth rates of around 15 per cent per annum growing at five times the worldwide growth rates. By operating at the convergence of chemicals, energy, power and pharmaceuticals, it can realise its full potential. The large domestic opportunity, an inherent strength in intellectual capital, access to global financial markets, strong knowledge of chemistry, strength in software engineering and its rich bio-diversity provide ample opportunity to make India a global force in the chemical industry. With a creative harnessing of these opportunities, appropriate restructuring of organisations, redesigned strategies, a change in the mindset and above all, dynamic leadership, it can usher in an era of unprecedented growth.

Since 1975, CHEMTECH, a truly pioneering effort, has to its credit manifold achievements. It has become an important catalyst across this entire spectrum, and has contributed significantly to the development of the industry. More than anything else, it has brought about a major change in attitudes and mindset.

I am happy that the CHEMTECH Foundation is redefining its role in its thrust areas so as to meet new and ever-growing challenges. This is extremely important at this juncture when technology is offering exciting solutions to challenges on the productivity front and innovations are opening up new windows of opportunity. Therefore, I am very happy that CHEMTECH has set before it the mission of 'Inspiring Intelligence' and 'Igniting Innovations'. The successful implementation of this noble objective would give a dramatic fillip to India's economic technological and social transformation. Their recent emphasis on Pharma and Biotechnology Industries strengthens my belief that knowledge-based industries will pave the way for progress and prosperity in the twenty-first century. All segments of the chemical industry need to work together in a seamless fashion to take advantage of the new era of convergence.

I hope a chronicle of CHEMTECH's journey will greatly help the industry to explore the future creatively and set new milestones to guide its forward march towards greater successes.

FOREWORD

I am happy to respond to Mr. Jasu Shah's invitation to write a 'Foreword' for the book 'The Journey is the Reward', which covers the story of 25 years of service to the Indian industry, the story of CHEMTECH Foundation, the story of the people who shaped it and the story of organisations, which have benefited from it.

Mr Jasu Shah, the driving force behind CHEMTECH Foundation, is a visionary. He pioneered International Trade Fairs and Conferences in 1975 at a time when such events were required the most. He focussed on 'Environment' since 1978, much before the Bhopal disaster, on computers since 1980 and Biotechnology since 1983 and today we see them as large growth areas. He is always in a hurry to bring technology to India abreast of time. There has been numerous developments worldwide in amazing discoveries, inventions and technologies. Wherever he toured, whatever good he saw, he wanted to bring its benefits to India.

At the same time, Mr. Shah, right from 1975, has provided a platform for the Indian Chemical and Process Engineering industry to display their products, expertise and services to demonstrate to the world and show them continuous achievements and progress in meeting global standards. In the 25 years of endeavour, he put India on the world's industrial map.

Faced with the magnitude and a variety of needs of the process industry and thinking globally, CHEMTECH not only responded to immediate needs but also took a long-term view. As India is making a transition into the future, Mr. Jasu Shah has given a new mantra 'Inspiring Intelligence – Igniting Innovation' with a thrust on knowledge-based industries. He has a burning zeal to carry the country among the great industrial nations of the world. For this, he claims no privileges.

CHEMTECH's journey of 25 years, without government's financial support, has been remarkable. As the journey continues from Silver to Gold, I wish CHEMTECH a great success in achieving the ultimate vision of Mr. Shah of making India a great industrial power.
